Vacation Bible School begins

Sarah McTyre and Harry Dross welcome the children as they arrive

Sarah McTyre briefs the volunteers on the activities for the day

With help from a lot of Park Central folks, Vacation Bible School begins!

For the 10th year in a row, children from the Salvation Army summer program and our own congregation are participating in Vacation Bible School.

More than 30 volunteers helped to make it happen, and the excitement of the children makes the effort worthwhile. This year's theme of Super God and Super Me is emphasized by decorations with cartoon-like posters and colors, but the Bible stories and presentations about real-life heroes provided lessons about God's love and how it could support human effort.

The first two days featured stories about heroes with strong Syracuse connections — Harriet Tubman and Frederick Douglass. The children from the Salvation Army had walked past one stop on the Underground Railroad — The Mission restaurant is now housed in the church where slaves once found shelter in the basement. The activities led by Harry Dross took place in the park where Frederick Douglass delivered one of his first orations in 1843.

The photos accompanying this story show some of the preparations. You'll find more pictures of the children on Facebook and in next week's Park Post.
